Maximize Your Meeting Notes

Its Not Just Note-Taking...

- After 1 hour, people retain <1/2 of information

- After 1 day, people forget >70% of information

- After 6 days, people forget 75% of information

98% of the population
doesn't multitask well

Studies show you lose up to 40% efficiency
when you multitask

...It's Understanding Our Business!

“A core business strength is making a connection between what’s going on and translating it back to our clients”

“Clients appreciate that we can recall things quickly”

Set Yourself Up for Success

Considerations

- What is your role? Is there a designated note taker?
- What is the setting?
  - ✓ Who are the key attendees?
- What are the objectives and goals of the meeting?
- What are the agenda items and key topics that might come up in a meeting?

Preparation

- Decide on format, structure and technique

Making the Most of Margins

Margin Notes

TEAM DISCUSSION POINTS

Need to cut budget by 25% for next fiscal year.

Decide which projects we'll stop doing instead of spreading the cuts across everything.

John speaks about merits of his project.

Josh diagrams on whiteboard the value chain of his project.

John asks what data we should gather to make these decisions.

Brenda provides a timeline.

Jennifer asks Brenda what her expectations are.

ARI'S MARGIN NOTES

- Instead of looking at the big picture and criteria to make cuts, John and Josh are quick to describe benefits of their work.
- John's project has missed last two deadlines. Should we review projects that haven't delivered?
- Is Brenda final decision maker?
- Is Brenda letting them talk to gather more data, or is she avoiding conflict?
- Why is it important to cut entire projects rather than spread loss across all work efforts?
- What if we looked at cuts across the infrastructure or marketing instead of just projects?
- Josh and John look only at Brenda when speaking.
- No one has mentioned how to make up 25% — we've gone straight to the cut and how to preserve what's most important.
- This is the third meeting this week where Jennifer has asked Brenda for guidance when Josh and John go back and forth.
- There are several things in our culture as a team that are dysfunctional.
